

Charity's Song

To: Charity

From: Chase

There’s coffee in the kitchen, sunrise on the blinds, You’re already up, already givin’ the world your time. You make the ordinary feel like somethin’ new, Every little moment somehow points back to you. You’re the steady in the storm, the calm when life gets loud, The kind of love that holds us close and never backs down. And I still catch my breath when I see you with our babies, Like God let me watch a miracle grow daily. Charity, you’re the rock of this family, The soft place we land, the strength underneath. On Mother’s Day, I just wanna say it out loud— I loved you then, but I love you more right now. You make every occasion feel like somethin’ sacred and true, And our kids are beyond blessed to have you as their mommy, too. Charity… it’s the greatest gift doin’ life with you. Danny Go mornings playin’ from a phone on the counter, Little feet dancin’ while you’re laughin’ even louder. Neighborhood walks, you hold their hands like a promise, Like nothin’ in this world could ever break your focus. Chuck-e-cheese adventures, you don’t even flinch, You show up full-hearted, like it all means everything. And when the day’s been long and the house finally gets quiet, You’re still the love that keeps on tryin’. Charity, you’re the rock of this family, The soft place we land, the strength underneath. On Mother’s Day, I just wanna say it out loud— I loved you then, but I love you more right now. You make every occasion feel like somethin’ sacred and true, And our kids are beyond blessed to have you as their mommy, too. Charity… it’s the greatest gift doin’ life with you. Bedtime stories, whispered prayers, and “one more” before they sleep, Couch cuddles in your leopard robe, their whole world on your knees. Best velcro-baby mom, you wear that like a crown, ‘Cause they feel safe in your heartbeat—so they don’t wanna put it down. And watchin’ you become a mother… it made my love go deeper, Made forever feel like somethin’ I could finally keep, yeah. Charity, you’re the rock of this family, The soft place we land, the strength underneath. On Mother’s Day, I just wanna say it out loud— I loved you then, but I love you more right now. You make every occasion feel like somethin’ sacred and true, And our kids are beyond blessed to have you as their mommy, too. Charity… it’s the greatest gift doin’ life with you. Yeah, Charity… happy Mother’s Day, my love— We’re so blessed… because of you.

Swoonsong