

My Heart Jaedyn

Happy Valentine's Day my love

Jaedyn, do you remember late night drives, Hands on the wheel, skylight notes in the sky? Heated seats on, we'd write forever in glass, My smile never left 'cause you loved me like that. Singing our hearts out with the windows up, Love in the lyrics, just fooling around. You caught me the first time my body gave in, Held me close—wouldn't let the hurt win. We walked through the park, I was talking to the ducks, You laughed so hard, said I was too much. Cappuccinos in hand, and lifesaver rings— Wedding vows in candy, you gave me everything. Twelve years falling, I keep falling for you— You're my rescue, my reason, my truth. When the world was heavy and hope was thin, Jaedyn, you pulled me back again and again. Through storms and silence, in all we've done, You're my heart, my home, my only one. There were nights after my stroke, when I couldn't speak, You were my voice, you were strength when I was weak. Hospital halls and the weight of the fight, You pushed me to finish, said I'd be alright and took our first flight. We went to Wendy's, I played it cool, But you knew the cravings—yeah, you saw through. You filled up our son's world with love and with light, Fought for him, won him back on my birthday night. Trips out to Vegas, chasing our sun, Every mountain we climbed—always two, never one. Through every setback, every degree, Your faith in me was all I'd ever need. Twelve years falling, I keep falling for you— You're my rescue, my reason, my truth. When the world was heavy and hope was thin, Jaedyn, you pulled me back again and again. Through storms and silence, in all we've done, You're my heart, my home, my only one. You showed up for our son, for every long night, For every slow victory, for every hard fight. With gummies as rings and cappuccinos to start, You made a new story, heart to broken heart. Now we're standing, looking towards something new, But there's nothing I'd face if it's not with you. Twelve years falling, I keep falling for you— You're my rescue, my reason, my truth. When the world was heavy and hope was thin, Jaedyn, you pulled me back again and again. Through storms and silence, in all we've done, You're my heart, my home, my only one. Here's to every year ahead, whatever comes our way, With a stronger heart and a love that'll never fade. Jaedyn, you're my universe, my forever song— With you beside me, I know I belong.
