

City of Sparks

To: Taylor

From: Lexi

We climbed the staircase, hearts racing in the cool night air. Rooftop dreams above the city, neon fire everywhere. You reached for my hand, your eyes said everything. The skyline shining on us, as I heard my future sing. Every wild tomorrow, every spark that makes me feel. You're the thunder in my silence, the truth behind what's real. Taylor, under city lights, you asked me forever. My heart found its rhythm in your touch. With your fire, your passion—nothing's ever better. I said yes to you, yes to us. We're writing our story in shining lights. Taylor, will you love me for all our lives? On highways after midnight, windows down, chasing songs. You drum on the steering wheel—wherever you go, I belong. You bring the blaze, you light me up, you're every runaway refrain. In a world of static faces, you're the one who calls my name. Every wild tomorrow, every spark that makes me feel. You're the thunder in my silence, the truth behind what's real. Taylor, under city lights, you asked me forever. My heart found its rhythm in your touch. With your fire, your passion—nothing's ever better. I said yes to you, yes to us. We're writing our story in shining lights. Taylor, will you love me for all our lives? Maybe love is just a rooftop moment, Maybe it's drumming out a beat in the dark. But with every sunrise and every promise. I see forever whenever I look at your heart. Taylor, under city lights, you asked me forever. My heart found its rhythm in your touch. With your fire, your passion—nothing's ever better. I said yes to you, yes to us. We're writing our story in shining lights. Taylor, will you love me for all our lives? We're writing our story in shining lights. Taylor, for all our lives.
